Probably the best definition of war is that given by Vatel, who at the be-ginning of the third book in his 'Law of Nations' defines war to be that state in

State of War Exists.

It is thus apparent that under the law there need be no formal declaration of war, but that under the definition of Vattel a state of war exists, so far as concerns the operations of the United States troops in Mexico, by reason of the fact that the United States is prosecut-ing its rights by force of arms and in a n which war is usually conducted.
